

the aeon collection

Designer radiator manufacturer, The Aeon Collection, has introduced a well-mounted version of its corner mounted Bamboo design. The design features four satin-finish thick hollow stainless steel tubes which are tapered at the edge. The use of hollow tubes results in an increased convection area and lower water content than would be expected. The radiator is 180 cm high, 27cm wide and 8cm deep. Bamboo can be used to create a spectacular focal point in modern apartments.

David Morgan Associates (DMA), the London based luminaire design company, has developed two new LED lighting systems for the Radiant division of The Belfer Group. The new designs are a bendable, modular linear LED system and a LED micro track system. The LED micro-track is one of the smallest section low voltage track systems available and is designed for use in retail display cabinets, museums and residential lighting applications. It features discreet LED spotlights pictured here.

Bristan is supplying 300 heated towel rails as part of the E70m refurbishment of the five star Mayfair Radisson Edwardian Hotel in London. The Radisson Edwardian is currently undergoing a major revamp, with Bristan joining names such as Fendi and Baccarat to help enhance the opulence and glamour of the hotel. The handmade Quirinius towel rail was selected for its high quality manufacture and compact design. The 300 Quirinius towel rails are all finished in chrome and boast 1.008 BTU heat output, while measuring just 38 x 68 x 38cm.

Axon, the designer brand from Hansgrohe, has expanded its product portfolio with the Axor Montreux bathroom collection. The belle époque served as the source of inspiration for this nostalgic range. The designers combined clean, geometric shapes with pure traditional elements such as filigree cross handles and ceramic components. Unique reminiscences of the belle époque include bridge mixers and a freestanding version of the bath tub mixer.
